JINGO BAD CRITICISED.

Alfred Austin, postmaster of Ragweed, has been busy this afternoon with his old-time "V. I. P." which seems to be getting a good deal of support from the council of the town.

According to the city council, the V. I. P. is not only a great benefit to the city, but also a great boon to the citizens of Ragweed.

"V. I. P." is short for "Voter's Incentive Program," which was established in the city council to encourage citizens to vote in the upcoming election.

"V. I. P." offers a variety of incentives to encourage citizens to vote, including free ice cream at the local ice cream shop, discounts at the local grocery store, and a chance to win a prize in a citywide contest.

The city council is hoping that "V. I. P." will not only increase voter turnout, but also improve the overall quality of the city's government.

Despite the city council's enthusiasm for "V. I. P.," there are some residents who are critical of the program.

"V. I. P. is a way to manipulate the minds of the people," said one resident.

"I don't see how giving away free ice cream and discounts is going to improve our government," said another resident.

However, the city council is determined to see "V. I. P." succeed.

"We believe that "V. I. P." is the best way to get our citizens involved in the government," said the city council's spokesperson.

"We are committed to making "V. I. P." work, and we are confident that it will be a success."
