NO WAGE FREEZE!

BY DAVID JONES

The wage freeze has been widely commented upon by the media. Many believe that the freeze will lead to a decline in the standard of living for the working class. However, there are those who believe that the freeze is necessary to control inflation. The debate continues and it is likely that there will be a lot of discussion about the issue in the coming weeks.

How should Labor fight inflation?

The ALP and Big Business

The Australian economy is in a state of crisis, with inflation running at a record high. The government has been accused of not doing enough to control inflation, with some economists calling for a more radical approach. The ALP has been criticized for its failure to implement effective policies to control inflation, and for its reliance on expansionary fiscal and monetary policies. The government has been accused of being too focused on short-term political gains and not enough on long-term economic stability.

The impact of inflation

Inflation is having a significant impact on the Australian economy. It is eroding the purchasing power of wages and placing an increased burden on household budgets. The cost of living is rising, with prices for goods and services increasing at a faster rate than wages. This is particularly problematic for those on fixed incomes or low wages, who are struggling to make ends meet.

Government response

The government has implemented a number of measures to try and control inflation, including raising interest rates and implementing price controls. However, some economists argue that these measures are not enough and that a more radical approach is needed. The ALP has been criticized for its reliance on expansionary policies, and for not doing enough to control inflation.

The future of the economy

The future of the Australian economy is uncertain. With inflation running high, the government will need to implement more effective policies to control it. The ALP will need to demonstrate its commitment to economic stability and to implement policies that are in the best interests of the Australian people. The economy will continue to be challenged by inflation, and the government will need to find a way to control it without stalling the economy.
Adelaide Secondary Students Strike

The secondary students in Adelaide have been on strike for over two months. The strike was called in response to the decision of the South Australian Government to increase education fees. The students were protesting against the increase in the fees for education services, which they believe will make education unaffordable for many students. The strike has been supported by the state’s education unions and has been met with resistance from the government.

April 11 Actions Prepare for June

The National Union of Students (NUS) has called for a series of strike actions in April to prepare for a major strike in June. The union is calling for students to take action against the government’s education policies, which they believe are unfairly targeting students. The NUS is calling for students to participate in protests, strikes, and demonstrations to show their solidarity with their fellow students across the country.

Fight for Abortion on Demand Needed

By TONY HARRISON

The right of women to control their own reproduction is one of the most basic human rights and has become a crucial issue in recent decades. The right to decide on the number of children they wish to have is essential for personal freedom and family planning.

A personal woman's right to choose when and whether to have a child is a basic human right. It is essential for women to be able to control their own reproduction.

The right to abortion is a fundamental human right and has been recognized by international law. The right to abortion is necessary for women to be able to exercise their reproductive rights.

Anti-Abortion Forces Mobilise

The projected private members bill in the NSW Legislative Council to prohibit abortion is drawing fierce opposition from the Anti-Abortion Federation of Australia. The group is dedicated to the protection of human life and believes that abortion is morally wrong.

The bill was introduced by Member for Lindsay, Bob Katter, who argues that it is necessary to protect the unborn and that abortion is a form of eugenics.

The bill has been debated in the NSW Legislative Council and has been referred to the Standing Committee on Legal and Constitutional Affairs for further consideration.

The National Wage Case

BY JIM DODDS

About 100 strikers, predominantly farm workers, met at the Federal Court on Tuesday to demand a national uprating of wages. The meeting was held in response to the Australian Workers Union's (AWU) call for a national strike to protest the lack of action by the state and federal governments on the national wage issue.

The AWU has estimated that up to 100,000 workers could join the strike, which is expected to last for up to a week. The union is seeking an increase of up to 10% for all workers, including farm workers, who are currently earning an average of $12 per hour.

The union has called on the government to implement a national wage policy, which would ensure that all workers receive a fair wage increase. The union has also called for the government to support the establishment of a national wage council, which would be responsible for setting wages and conditions for all workers.

The government has so far refused to support the union's demands, citing the need to protect the jobs of workers in other industries.

Action: NZ Tour

The NZ government has cancelled the tour of the South African cricket team, in response to the growing international pressure to boycott South Africa. The cancellation comes after the NZ Cricket Board announced that it would not support the tour due to the ongoing human rights abuses in South Africa.

The tour was scheduled to take place in November, but has now been postponed until 1981. The new date is expected to be announced in December.

The cancellation of the tour is part of a global campaign to pressure South Africa to end apartheid and allow for free elections. The campaign has gained momentum in recent months, with several countries refusing to recognize the government of South Africa.

Liberation of Southern Tonga

BY JADAN

Southern Tonga has declared their independence from the South Pacific Territories. The declaration was made on the eve of the UN General Assembly vote on the issue.

The Southern Tonga Liberation Front (STLF) has been fighting for independence for several years, and has recently gained support from other Pacific Island nations.

The South Pacific Territories are a group of islands in the South Pacific Ocean, which includes Tuvalu, Nauru, and the South Pacific Islands. The islands have been under Australian administration since the late 19th century.

The United Nations is currently considering a resolution that would recognize the independence of the South Pacific Territories.

Vic. ALP Assembly Rejects Omega Base

BY JIM MCBAST

The Victorian ALP Assembly has rejected a proposal to build a new military base in Omega. The proposal was vetoed by the state's Labor Party, which has a majority of seats in the Assembly.

The proposal was made by the Australian Defence Force, which is seeking to expand its facilities in the state. The base would be located near the town of Omega, and would accommodate up to 1,000 personnel.

The rejection of the proposal has gained support from local residents, who have concerns about the impact of the base on the environment and the community.

The issue has also sparked a debate about the role of the military in the state, with some arguing that it is too expensive and too powerful.

Tramways Women Fight For Equal Job Opportunities

By JOE GORDON

The struggle for justice and equality continues among the tramways workers. The women have long been fighting for equal opportunities, not only in terms of wages but also in terms of job roles and responsibilities.

A recent example of this struggle was the recent strike by female tramway workers in Melbourne. The women, who make up a significant portion of the tramway workforce, have been fighting for better pay and working conditions.

A union spokesman said the strike was a response to the company's refusal to negotiate on the workers' demands. He said the women had been working under extremely difficult conditions for far too long and that the company had been using them as a means of reducing costs.

The strike began on Monday morning and was expected to last for several days. The union has called on the company to negotiate in good faith and to meet the workers' demands.

Lift Workers Strike Enters 5th Week

Lift maintenance workers in Melbourne have been on strike for five weeks, with the latest demands including better pay and conditions.

The union has accused the company of using the strike as a way to weaken the workers' bargaining power.

The strike has caused significant delays and disruptions for many residents and workers in the area.

Trainee Teachers Demonstrate Over Pay

By JIMmy SODGENDY

On Friday April 21, a group of trainee teachers took to the streets in Melbourne to demand better pay and working conditions.

The teachers, who are still in their final years of training, have been struggling to make ends meet while working long hours.

The protest was organized by the Australian Education Union (AEU) and was attended by hundreds of teachers and supporters.

The teachers were clear about their demands, which included higher salaries, better working conditions, and more support from the government.

Evans Deakin Shutdown

By ALAN BOWDEN

The shutdown of Evans Deakin, a major employer in Melbourne, has caused significant concern among workers and their families.

The company, which provides services to the government, has announced that it will be closing its doors due to a lack of funds.

The closure will affect hundreds of workers and their families, who have been left struggling to make ends meet.

The government has promised to provide support to those affected by the shutdown, including financial aid and retraining programs.

The workers have expressed their frustration at the lack of consultation and support from the company and the government.

Strike by Apprentices

By FRANK MURPHY

Apprentices and trainees are not the only ones facing difficult conditions in the workplace. The government needs to take action to ensure that all workers are treated fairly and with respect.

The finance minister announced that the government would be reviewing the apprenticeship system to ensure that it is fair and just.

The review will consider issues such as the role of employers and the government in apprenticeships, and the need for better support for apprentices and their families.

The government has also committed to providing support to those affected by the apprenticeship system, including financial aid and training programs.

The workers have expressed their appreciation for the government's commitment to reforming the apprenticeship system, and hope that the changes will make a real difference to their lives.
French H.S. Students Fight Conscription

BY H. TOWNSEND

In 1970, the French government had planned to conscript 60,000 young men in April, 1970, for the 1970-1971 conscription. The French army, which is based on the conscription system, was facing a manpower shortage due to the draft. The students and the left in France had called for a general strike to protest against the conscription. Over 500,000 students went on strike on April 18, 1970, demanding the abolition of conscription. The strike spread across the country, with students and workers joining in solidarity. The government eventually agreed to the demands of the students and the strike ended peacefully.

258,000 Danish Workers Out on Strike

On March 31, 1970, 258,000 Danish workers went on strike in a nationwide protest against the government's austerity measures. The strike was the result of a long-standing dispute over the government's economic policies, which were seen as unfairly benefiting the wealthy while mmororising the working class. The strike lasted for several days, with workers demanding better wages and working conditions.

Marcos' Troops Attack Mindanao Muslims

In 1970, President Ferdinand Marcos of the Philippines launched a military campaign against Muslim separatist groups in Mindanao. The conflict was caused by tensions between the government and Muslim separatists, who sought to establish an independent Muslim state in the southern region of the Philippines. The military campaign resulted in widespread violence and displacement of the Muslim population. The conflict continues to this day, with periodic outbreaks of violence.

British Students Strike Over Grants

In 1970, students across the UK went on strike to protest against cuts to government funding for universities. The strikes were part of a broader movement against austerity measures that were seen as disproportionately affecting students. The strikes lasted for several weeks, with students demanding better funding for education and the right to vote in university elections.

Nixon Renews Bombing Threat

By JOHN CASSIDY

Washington, June 1 - President Nixon said yesterday that the United States would continue bombing North Vietnam if the North Vietnamese did not meet his demands for an end to the war within the next three months.

The President's statements, which were made in a meeting with the Press, were his first public comments on the situation in Vietnam since he announced a three-month halt to the air war there in March.

"We are prepared to continue our military effort," Nixon said. "We are prepared to continue our military effort as long as the North Vietnamese will not meet the conditions that I have laid down." These conditions include a complete withdrawal of all North Vietnamese forces from South Vietnam and the release of all American and allied prisoners of war.

"Nixon's renewed threat of military action," added a spokesman for the White House, "is designed to pressure the North Vietnamese to begin negotiations on the terms we have specified."

International Persecution Hits Palestinians

By JAMES PETERS

Jerusalem, June 5 - The United Nations has condemned the continuing persecution of Palestinians in the Occupied Territories by Israeli forces.

The UN Working Group of Experts on Human Rights in the Occupied Territories issued a report today, saying that Israel's policies of settlement and military occupation have led to "massive" violations of Palestinian rights.

The report, which was compiled by a team of international experts, found that Israel's policies have resulted in the displacement of Palestinian communities, the closure of schools and hospitals, and restrictions on freedom of movement.

The report also criticized Israel's use of force against Palestinian protestors, citing recent incidents in which Israeli soldiers have been accused of using excessive force.

"The UN's report is a clear condemnation of Israel's policies," said a spokesperson for the Palestinian Authority. "We will continue to support the struggle for Palestinian rights and to fight against occupation."

AUSTRALIAN IN 1945

World War II was the most significant happening in Australian economic and social history. Throughout the 1940s for the first time in 80 years the economy was totally mobilised for war, the production of the goods and services of the peacetime economy being converted to the manufacture and supply of war materials and services. As a result of this the Australian economy was transformed. The outcome was a more modern and powerful economy which, however, retained its fundamental weaknesses.

THE CURTIN GOVERNMENT, 1941-45

By Peter Conrick

The Australian Labor Party, under the leadership of Prime Minister John Curtin, led the country through World War II, implementing policies that transformed the economy and society. This article provides a historical account of the government's actions during that period.

IN BRIEF:

The Ministry of Defence was established to coordinate the production and supply of war materials. The Bureau of Metal Supplies was set up to ensure the efficient allocation of metal. The Ministry of Production was created to oversee the production of essential goods. The Ministry of Air was established to manage the aviation industry. The Ministry of Shipping was created to control the shipping industry.

THE CONSOLIDATED PARTY AND POLITICAI INJUISIBILITY: 1943-44

The government introduced the Consolidated Party Act in 1943, which was designed to prevent the formation of opposition parties. This act was later amended in 1944 to allow for the registration of opposition parties.

The TURN TO AMERICA:

Australia's economic relationship with the United States was crucial during the war. The Lend-Lease Act of 1941 provided a significant source of aid, with the United States supplying essential goods to Australia. This relationship continued after the war, with the United States providing technical and economic assistance.

The SPIRIT OF THE ENTERPRISE:

The government encouraged the development of small businesses and cooperatives, with the aim of increasing self-sufficiency and reducing reliance on imported goods.
