THE ARAB REVOLUTION
MORATORIUM: KEEPING UP THE MOMENTUM

ROD WEBB

The Moratorium was being used as something very significant in potential political power. It has been the key to the success of the movement, and it's the key to the success of the movement's effectiveness of affecting the type of policies that we're trying to influence.

In many ways, the Moratorium is a powerful tool for social change. It allows for a concentrated and sustained effort in raising awareness and mobilizing public support. The Moratorium has provided a platform for discussion and debate, giving voice to the concerns and demands of activists.

However, the Moratorium is not without its challenges. It requires sustained effort and dedication, and it can be a daunting task to maintain momentum over time. But with the right strategies and resources, the Moratorium can continue to be a powerful tool for social change.

WHERE THE VORWURD IS"
Women: Caste, Class Oppressed Sex

BY IVYIN REED

The intermingling of the worlds of work and family in the daily lives of women is a timeless phenomenon in the history of the sexes. Yet it is only recently that a mounting awareness of the oppression women suffer in the workplace has emerged. The lack of attention to this aspect of women's lives is not due to a lack of historical evidence. The historian has noticed the existence of women's work and the exclusion of women from certain fields, but has failed to examine the nature of the oppression. The woman's work is the source of her oppression, but it is also the means by which she is able to gain her liberation. The woman's work is the source of her oppression, but it is also the means by which she is able to gain her liberation. Adelaide High Schools

Graham Tubbenhauer

The Adelaide high school movement is the strongest among the band of specialist schools. There were of course huge differences between schools, with the headmasters not unknown among the public, but the Adelaide system was well known for its efficiency and success.

The Sydney system was the most obvious of the three movements, and it was also the most successful. The Sydney high school movement was strongly supported by the public and the government. The leading schools were the Sydney Grammar School, the Sydney High School, and the Sydney Technical College.

The Melbourne high school movement was also well supported by the community and the government. The leading schools were the Melbourne Grammar School, the Melbourne High School, and the Melbourne Technical College.

The red university is a strategy and not a slogan. One does not demand it on the administration. An example of an application is the walk-out in 1968.

After Nixon invaded Cambodia, there went on strike and boycotted their lectures, while at the same time using university facilities for the anti-war movement. An example of anti-war posters were produced by art departments, which were used to broadcast anti-war material.

This showed that even under capitalism, universities can be used to serve the anti-war movement. It is important in creating the transformation of society.

The SYA strategy, as decided by the workshop, is as follows:

1. A Red University - using the university against the system.
2. The black power movement should be avoided to avoid an elitist stand.
3. Build a movement around the various forms of protest.
4. Participate in student elections as a means of winning students and not as a means of defeating the student body.

Evolution of hand-in-hand with the gay, broad radicalization of youth, the school movement has in the past few years assumed an increasingly important role. It represents a vast, untapped resource of potential activity, which, given the right conditions, can be made to work in the interests of the new generation.

The role of the new generation is to take over the schools. This represents the greatest number of high school students in the Moratorium and the overthrowing of schools within the system of education.

The energy behind this movement is the fact that there is no specific organization to contain and direct it, and to extend participation in the war and what it represents. An organization, by advancing and adopting relevant demands, can make considerable gains through the high school Moratorium movement.

Here lies one of the major reasons for the folding of the Student Underground movement. It failed to do this. Instead of Student Underground replacing the old system, the new movement succeeded in schools by carrying their demands further by following up in areas where the movement had opened up new ground, the Moratorium replaced Student Underground.

Our support in this new movement is the new organization, the new movement, and the new direction they are taking in going through the system.

Perspectives for the future are inevitable. The future is defined by the ideas we adopt. The solution lies in the clarification of ideas and to lift everyone out of the muck and mire. We are facing a situation which requires that the student underground needs to go much deeper than it has gone. We need a new strategy, which can exploit this new radicalization and build the anti-war movement.

The immediate tasks of the new movement are:

1. To information the production of the Bill of Rights poster for wide distribution.
2. To prepare a letter to the editor, which she can exploit if the new radicalization and build the anti-war movement.
3. To make the schools new again.
4. To bring together the new movement.

High school students who are members of the new movement will act as social workers with the high school movement, distributing a form of self-education, putting forward our ideas and attempting to give leadership to the new movement.
